GEN. WASHINGTON.

His Movements Against Cornwallis.

But to complete the chain of incidents which finally entangled Cornwallis in the fatal Yorktown meshes, we must cross into the camps of the Americans and their friends the French. Washington, who, with a wretchedly clothed and often but half-fed army, had been sustaining the cause of the Revolution through six anxious years, never felt the embarrassment of his situation more than in the early part of the year 1781. He could do little to assist the South, and saw no flattering prospects of achieving anything decisive in the North. The only ray of hope that flashed through the clouds was the probability that in the course of the summer a large French fleet would appear upon the American coast, with whose assistance something might be effected. But even here so many contingencies were involved that success still seemed an aggravating uncertainty. A campaign, nevertheless, was arranged. On the 23d of May, Washington met Count de Rochambeau, commanding the French allies at Newport, in conference at Wethersfield, Ct., where it was agreed that the French should join the Americans on the Hudson, and an attempt be made to capture New York city. A request was sent later to the Count de Grasse, Admiral of the expected fleet in the West Indies, to co-operate by entering the harbor. This was Washington's plan, while it would seem that Rochambeau, although yielding to him, had misgivings in regard to it. At the same conference the project of marching to Virginia was alluded to, but it was held that that State could be relieved quite as effectually by attacking Clinton in the North, and preventing him from sending further reinforcements Southward. Still, everything depended upon De Grasse. Without him the year would probably close with matters continuing status quo, with him a great blow might be struck somewhere, and that somewhere was now the problem. Although Washington had committed himself at the Wethersfield conference to an attack upon New York, and expected the co-operation of the French Admiral, we find, as the summer advanced, and the situation in Virginia changed by the retirement of Cornwallis to the sea-coast, that he recognized the possibility of a change of plan on his own part, and this before De Grasse's final destination and intentions were known. By the 2d of August he had informed La Fayette of the contingency that might take him to Virginia, where they could unite in falling upon Cornwallis; and he had sounded Mr. Robert Morris as to transportation from Philadelphia, from which we are to infer—as, indeed, one of his letters authorizes the inference—that even had De Grasse come to New York, Washington was ready to suggest his sailing back to the Chesapeake, while the army would move to the same point. In other words, the march upon Cornwallis, perhaps the most splendid episode of the war, was an alternative plan already maturing in Washington's mind before word came from De Grasse that he should not sail further north than Virginia.

De Grasse's announcement that he would be in the Chesapeake about the 1st of September, and that he expected to meet the allied army there and not at New York, did not reach Washington until Aug. 14. At once the latter turned his entire attention to the descent upon Cornwallis. Demonstrations had been made against New York in July with a serious intent, but now they were conducted as a feint. It was of the greatest importance that Clinton should not suspect the intended march until Washington was well on his way southward. The pian remained a profound secret with both the American and French chiefs. The troops were put on the move again toward the city as if for an attack, and when they turned about and crossed the Hudson at King's ferry, late in August, the feint was still kept up on the Jersey side for a day or two, when the entire force landed for the Chesapeake. On the 23d of September the American wing, two thousand strong—four thousand having been left to guard the Hudson, under Heath—marched through Philadelphia, followed the next day by the French contingent, which delighted Congress and the citizens with its inspiring music and brilliant appearance. Here the news was received that De Grasse had arrived in the Chesapeake with a powerful fleet, and Washington pushed on with the liveliest anticipations of success. The troops took the straight road to the head of the Elk and Baltimore, and, after a short delay, embarked in transports for the James. In spite of the fatigues of the march, they were all in good spirit, with hardly a sick man among them, and seemed to realize the probable decisive results of the movement. "We shall soon look in upon Cornwallis as stern as the grave," wrote an officer to a friend in the North, and he only reflected the general expectation. From Baltimore, Washington and Rochambeau and their suites rode rapidly overland, stopping at Mount Vernon on the 9th and 10th—the chief's first visit to his home for six years—and on the 16th reached the camp of Lafayette at Williamsburg, who had been reinforced with 3,000 French troops, under St. Simon, brought on by De Grasse. When Clinton, at New York, woke up to the fact that Washington had given him the slip, he saw no other way of meeting the danger to which Cornwallis would be exposed but by attempting to go to his relief by sea.

La Fayette's little army at Williamsburg, the American part of which had been hovering about and dodging Cornwallis ever since he entered the State—once, indeed, attacking him at Green Springs, near Jamestown, but without success—received Washington with unbounded enthusiasm. As he approached the camps with Rochambeau, the troops turned out on their parades, a salute of twenty-one guns was fired, and later in the afternoon the Marquis St. Simon gave a sumptuous entertainment, at which the chiefs and all the officers were present. "To add to the happiness of the evening," says one of the guests, an elegant band of music played an introductory part of a French opera, signifying the happiness of the family when blessed with the presence of their father and their great dependence upon him. About 10 o'clock the company rose up, and, after mutual congratulations, and the greatest expression of joy, they separated. In a few days the troops from the northward arrived in transports from the head of the Chesapeake, landing near Williamsburg by way of the James, and on the 27th of September the combined force was ready to move upon Cornwallis at Yorktown below. The situation thus presented was the great surprise of the Revolution. It appears as one of the few grand relieving features in an otherwise comparatively tedious war, for here we have a piece of strategy on Washington's part which involved for the first time extensive and critical movements, and whose details were carried out with singular precision and success. Clinton is quietly left in the lurch at New York; Washington boldly marches 400 miles away, and suddenly crushes his famous lieutenant at a point where assistance can not reach him.—Harper's Magazine.

The Kentucky House has passed a bill to strike from the statutes imprisonment for life for murder, but it is thought the Senate will defeat it.

The appointment of a Court of Appeals which will declare readjustment constitutional is one of the earliest acts expected of the Virginia Legislature.

There were in the State, 412,028 white school children, between six and twenty years of age, and 47,924 colored in 1880, but only 406,095 white and 44,930 colored in 1881.

The last annual report of the State auditor shows that Bourbon, Boyle, Fayette, Jackson, Johnson, Mercer and Oldham counties raised no corn in the years 1880 and 1881.

There are prospects that the Nicaraguan Canal project will die. Gen. Grant has withdrawn his name as an incorporator, and it is expected that other prominent gentlemen will follow suit.

Small-pox is spreading through Illinois, particularly along the Mississippi river. Steamboat officers will be required to enforce the vaccination of all their hands, or they will not be permitted to land.

At a meeting at Toledo, Ohio, recently, Kentucky, Ohio and Michigan Trotting Circuit was formed, and dates made for spring races at Louisville, Cincinnati, Maysville, Columbus, Toledo, Detroit, Jackson, Saginaw and Grand Rapids.

The N. Y. Herald contains a list of the names of those who perished by the burning of the Ring Theater, at Vienna, in Austria. The list is the most accurate yet presented to the public. It fills five closely printed columns of the Herald, and contains the names of eight hundred and ninety-four victims, including men, women and children. It is possible that this terrible number may yet be enlarged.

The Atlanta Cotton Fair was a great success notwithstanding the costs of buildings and expenses footed up more than a quarter of a million of dollars. Something less than half this sum was subscribed as stock, and upon this there will be a dividend when the business of the association is wound up. The good achieved was the stimulus given to industrial enterprise at the South, the acquaintance of the people with improvements in machinery, the turning of Northern capital to Southern fields, and the friendly intercourse between people from different parts of the country who assembled there. The value of the exhibition, though greatest for the South, belongs to the whole country, since the agricultural inventions of the North were prominent with the products of the South.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

THURSDAY EVENING, JAN. 12, 1882.

Our rapid boys who spend their time
In frolicking and sporting,
Will very likely have a chance,
This week, to do some courting.
And let them bear this truth in mind,
As judgment grows the riper,
That he who figures in the dance
Must surely "pay the piper."

Freight to go by the Kentucky Central to the interior is now shipped by the Morning
Mail to this city.

The new horse disease, pink-eye, has broken out in this city. Some of the stage and hvy horses are afflicted with it.

The town of Danville, Ky., has appropriated $200 for the vaccination of its citizens. Maysville might profitably do the same thing.

Next Sunday evening at seven o'clock
Elder J. B. Briney will preach a sermon to young people. Subject: Getting Ready to get Married.

The railroad bridge over Licking river near Cynthiana, has been washed away again. It was carried away by the freshet in that stream yesterday.

At the recent election at Vanceburg,
Joseph Sparks was chosen mayor, John Sanders, marshal, E. H. Fitch, attorney, and L. H. Parker, assessor.

The Morning Mail to-day brought for Omar Dodson 212 barrels molasses, 37
hogsheads of sugar, 59 barrels of rice, beside a large quantity of miscellaneous freight.

We noticed yesterday, standing in front of the Merrimac Warehouse at one time fifteen wagons loaded with tobacco. The weather has been very favorable for moving the crop.

Rev. A. M. Collins, who has been lecturing in this city and Aberdeen is having great success at the latter place and with lecture there again to-night. The public is invited to hear him.

Neal, Craft and Ellis, under the escort
of the state troops, arrived safely at Catlettsburg. No attempt at violence was made at any point along the route. The grand jury has been considering the case
but the result has not yet been made public.

The marriage of Miss Ella Mathews, one of our most attractive, and popular young ladies, to Mr. James C. Newcomb, editor and proprietor of the Ripley (O.) Bee and Times, will be solemnized at the residence of Mr. W. B. Mathews the bride's father at five o'clock Wednesday evening,
January 18th.

The painting of Dr. A. H. Wall's new residence, on Front street, by Mr. A. B.
Greenwood, has been finished and is pronounced by all who have seen it as very fine work. Mr. Greenwood has used his best skill and spared no pains to make this the best piece of work he has ever done.
It certainly reflects the highest credit upon his skill and taste.

The marriage of Mrs. Susan Bently to Mr. Charles Fowler, was solemnized at the residence of Mr. H. Hubbard of this city, on the 5th inst., Rev J. B. Briney officiating. The following is a list of the presents received by the bride:

The groom, handsome necklace and bracelets.
Alex. Fowler, silver castor.
Miss Kate Fowler, silver pickle stand.
Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Dye, wash stand set.
Mrs. M. J. Wilson, pair of vases.
Thomas Fowler, hat rack.
Mrs. Little Fowler, handsome lamp.
Aunt Battell, needle and thread case.
Miss Fannie Hubbard, butter knife.
Miss Mollie Neal, butter stand.
Wm. Fowler, dressing gown for the groom.

LATEST FROM CATLETSBURG.

Arrival of the Prisoners—Intense Excitement Prevailing—The Case Still in the Hands of the Grand Jury.

Special to the DAILY BULLETIN.

CATLETSBURG, KY., January 12, 1882.—
The State Guards in charge of the Ashland murderers arrived here safely at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. The murderers were immediately lodged in the jail. The guards are quartered at the court house and the various county buildings.
The case has been submitted to the grand jury and is still in their hands. Thus far about thirty witnesses have been examined. The most intense excitement prevails and a strong guard has been placed over the prisoners.

Circuit Court.

SECOND DAY.

W. A. Stockdale and others were convicted of setting up a gaming table and fined $50 and costs.

Wm. Munsing, sr., was found guilty of selling liquor to a minor and fined $50 and costs.

W. A. Stockdale was found guilty of permitting a gaming table to be set up and exhibited on his premises and fined $250 and costs.

W. R. Robinson, a painter by occupation, who some years ago lived in this city,
a few months ago, in a drunken brawl at Malden, W. Va., shot and killed Adam Belcher, marshal of the town. The trial has since taken place and resulted in Robinson's conviction of murder in the first degree and a sentence of death. The following despatch gives the particulars:

W. R. Robinson, who was tried and convicted this term of court for the murder of Adam Belcher, town sergeant of Malden, on the 15th of November, received his sentence to-day. He received the fatal sentence without flinching,
and when the judge closed he said: "Thank
you. I am hung by prosecuting attorney Snyder's mob," meaning the jury. He also wanted to know if the court was taking revenge on him for the numerous murders committed in the county for the past ten years. This is the first sentence of death passed upon a man in this county since 1858, when Press Farley was hung for the murder of his wife; but, judging from the promptness with which this court is forcing criminals to trial, there will be several like sentences during the present year. Robinson's execution has been fixed for April 7th, unless an appeal, which has been applied for, is granted.

G. M. WILLIAMS.

Mrs. W. E. Lane, whose sad death at Augusta, by her own hand we have already noticed, died between six and seven o'clock on the morning of the 11th inst.
When she got up about six o'clock
she was in good spirits and played with her little son for a few minutes. A little later she went into an adjoining room and fired the fatal shot into her left breast. She lived about two hours. No cause is assigned for the rash act.

A DESPATCH from Louisville, to the Cincinnati Engineer announces the assignment for the benefit of his creditors, of Dr.
H. Ebersole, formerly of this city. The despatch is as follows:

The deed of assignment between H. Ebersole and D. H. French of Louisville, Ky., to whom the former assigns all his property of every kind was filed with county clerk Webb, to day (January 9th) and takes with it all his real estate transaction in this city as well as many houses and lots in Covington, Ky. Mr. Ebersole, who is forced into an assignment, has been an invalid for several years, and consequently has not been able to attend to his business. He has visited Florida, several times and engaged in the cultivation of an orange grove, but the decline of his health continued, and he now assigns for the benefit of his creditors. The estate is one of the largest that has been assigned here for several years. Mr. Ebersole is well known throughout Ohio, especially at Cleveland and Cincinnati.

A Queen in Her Own Right.

What is pride? Pride is the possession which constantly urges us to rise above our fellow beings. Pride is the chief cause of the rise and fall of thrones, of feuds among families and friends, of wars, of duels, of discords which we would never witness were it not for the odious sentiment, pride. Pride of wealth and fame, of beauty and accomplishments, of ancestry, all these are different kinds of false pride.

Pride of wealth heads the list. What is not done to obtain riches? Even in this enlightened era, many would sell their souls to the legendary fiend of mediæval times, if possible, to obtain more wealth than their neighbors.

Fame comes next. What horrors are not passed through in order to become notorious, in order to leave to posterity a name covered with glory; to attain the eminent heights of power and dominion over nations?

Then comes pride of beauty, which, though seeming less powerful, is stronger yet than all other kinds of pride combined. A beautiful woman's aim in life consists in heightening her style of beauty, in becoming the belle of society and airing her accomplishments. All her better feelings are sacrificed to pride.

Last, but not least, comes the foolish pride of ancestry, a doting hobby of narrow-minded people who prefer the man with a pedigree to an honest one. Are not all honest men equal? Thrice blessed be America, my native land, where the finger of scorn is not pointed at a man not descending in direst line from barons of the feudal times.

My dissertation against sinful pride does not imply that we should be entirely devoid of honest pride. We must, on the contrary, be very proud of an unsullied name, of a pure career, of a life of goodness and of all honorable actions and virtues.

A Kentucky girl, most beautiful and accomplished, the reigning belle of the fashionable circles of New York, New Orleans and Washington, while visiting Rome, was presented to the Pope. "Kneel, my daughter," said he, as she stood erect in her imperial grace before him; "all kneel to me except the daughters of sovereigns."

"I am a princess in my own right, your Holiness," she replied.

"How can that be, when you are an American born?"

"In my country the people are sovereigns, and I am a daughter of the people."

The Pope smiled a gracious assent, saying: "Then receive an old man's blessing."

Native and Foreign-Born Population.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1882.

The Sun for 1882, will make its office, the annual revolution under the present management, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. The Sun's light is for mankind and womanhood of every sort, but its genial warmth is for the good, while a poornshot discount on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

The Sun of 1882 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrase of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of the Sun.

It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after the Sun. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of the Sun's example.

The Sun of 1882, will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with the Sun. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bohemia.

In politics we have decided opinions and are accustomed express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and eve is. That habit is the only secret of the Sun's political course.

The Weekly Sun gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of the unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete the Weekly Sun, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like the Sunday Sun, each number of which is a Gold-crown of interesting literature, with the poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

It our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for the Sun.

Our terms are as follows. For the daily Sun, a four-page sheet of twenty-eighty columns, the price by mail is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year, or including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.50 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of the Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid. The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.
